To whom-it-may-concern:

The proposed Microsoft settlement should ALLOW for other companies to FAIRLY have access to the same markets. Microsoft has money and clout, but their products are highly integrated together forcing other companies out of the picture. The American way says free enterprise allows competition and innovation. If Microsoft is allowed to undercut other companies with less money and clout and a possible lower quality product, is that a fair settlement? ....I don't think so. People are starting to notice Microsoft's security failures now in a larger way. Do we want them to control our data without full accountability? Accountability helps when other companies can be used as leverage to force compliance.

Thank you!!
